Food in space: Astronauts have already visited the Moon and lived on space stations. They've never been to another planet, but they might visit Mars soon. The astronauts will spend about six months traveling back to the Earth. They'll be away from the Earth for about three years, so they'll need a lot of food! It's very expensive to take food into space. It costs about 120,000 dollars. Of course, they will need to take quite a lot of food with them to feed the astronauts for three years. This amount of fresh food cannot stay fresh, and is very expensive to take, so they need to find food that is not very heavy. At the moment, astronauts in space stations eat dried food. It's very light, so it doesn't cost a lot of money to carry it into space. But astronauts stay healthier and happier if they eat fresh food. In the future, astronauts on Mars may grow vegetables like lettuce, spinach and carrots. Astronauts on Mars will probably have special machines. They'll use these machines to change beans into foods that taste like meat or cheese. They probably won't eat real meat or cheese because it won't be possible to keep animals in space.

A. The Earth.                      B. The Moon.                      C. Mars.                      D. Space.

A. Six months.                      B. One year.                      C. Two years.                      D. Three years.
23. Why do the astronauts eat dried food?
A. Because it is very healthy                      B. Because it makes them happy
C. Because it is cheap to buy                      D. Because it is cheap to carry
24. What may astronauts do in the future?
A. Take enough fresh food for their journey
